State Watches Moves Of Grand Jury Now In Session

(Associated Press)

BIRMINGHAM, May 18—Although the grand jury re-assembled promptly at nine o'clock this morning after two weeks recess jurors were not expected to go into a further investigation of the Flat Top and other prison camp cases until this afternoon. In all probability the reports to Governor Brandon, drafted by a sub-committee of the grand jury, relating to the findings of the Knox case, will be approved late today and forwarded to the capitol.

Much interest was attached to this document. It is believed the jurors will demand that the convict system be altered materially, that the present system of working convicts in mines, operated by the state of Alabama, be immediately discontinued.

The report moreover is expected to include the high lights of the past investigation of the death of James W. Knox, Mobile county convict, whose death at Flat Top in 1924 caused a statewide sensation and resulted in the indictment on first degree murder of Warden Charles R. Davis and four convicts. Reference is also expected to be made to the death of Frank Harper, for whose death Deputy Warden W. A. Bates has been indicted.

Flat Top mines will be further investigated as will the two other state operating prison mines, Banner and Aldridge.

The jury in addition is expected to probe a reported shortage in the accounts at Flat Top. C. C. Brooks, a state accountant has completed an audit of the prison books and is said to be in readiness to make a complete report to the jurors of his findings.

Much interest centered about the appearance this morning of Dr. F. F. Blair, physician, member of the state board of administration. It is understood that Dr. Blair who has been before the grand jury previously is again to testify.

The signed statement also charged that members of the crew donned life preservers ahead of the passengers, thereby causing much concern to the women on board.

Although the statement criticized the members of the crew, the Seneca's commander, Captain Lee, was praised highly.

MUD IN WATER TO BE ELIMINATED BY EARLY NEXT WEEK

Explanation Given By Water Company Officials

STAND PIPE IS BEING PAINTED

Course of Pressure Is Changed And Old Mud Stirred

Presence of mud in water served by the Alabama Water company here is expected to be eliminated in the next week, it was stated today by local officials of the company.

Not much difficulty has been experienced by customers in private homes, but considerable mud was seen in ice manufactured by the Decatur Ice and Coal company, which used the city water supply, and a protest was made by the company to city authorities.

Officials of the water company explained that the old standpipe in the city park area, now is undergoing a process of spring cleaning and is not being used to supply water. All of the water was drained from the standpipe and it is being painted inside and out.

The two cities are being supplied with water direct from the pumping station and from the new standpipe on Water street, Decatur. This, obviously, causes some change in the course of the pressure through the Decatur mains, which has stirred, to some extent, the mud which probably accumulated years ago, before the water was filtered here.

An indication of how well the water is filtered now was given by the fact that there was virtually no mud whatever in the bottom of the standpipe, when it was drained, despite the fact that it was the first time in several years it had been entirely empty. The resumption of pressure on the original lines, it was believed, will entirely eliminate all mud in the service to patrons.

ORGANIZED LABOR HITS POWER OFFER

Resolutions Forwarded President And To Senator Heflin

(Associated Press)

SHEFFIELD, Ala., May 18.—The unanimous passing of a resolution condemning any action by congress or any official of the United States government to turn over, sell or lease Muscle Shoals, or allow it to be used, or to dispose of it for any purpose other than originally designed together with the sending of a 108-word telegram, incorporating a summary of the resolution to President Coolidge, President Green, of the American Federation of Labor and eSpator Heflin, took place as the feature morning activity of the Alabama Federation of Labor convention in session here today.

Characterizing in the resolution that any attempt to dispose of Muscle Shoals to any "private self-seeking interest who would exploit these great properties for their own selfish aims" would be "little less than an insult to the integrity and stability of the great American government, a violation of democratic principles, a prostitution of the confidences of the American people and admitting a veritable economic bondage upon the people of the South."

The resolution also provided that copies would be sent to every department of the American Federation of Labor and to each congressman and senator.

The telegram follows: 'President Coolidge; President William Green; Senator Heflin; Washington: The Alabama Federation of Labor, in convention here today, unanimously adopted a resolution condemning any effort on the part of the congress, or officials of the government in turning over, leasing, selling or allowing use of Muscle Shoals by any private interest for the exploitation of power. This resolution petitions congress to act to dispose of Muscle Shoals along the lines for which it was originally built. Any other disposition of it to private interests, mainly for power purposes, would be undemocratic and the prostitution of the confidences of the American tax payer, whose money built it. Copies of resolutions are being forwarded to all departments of organized labor.'

FIRST FATALITY OF 1926 REUNION TAKES THE LIFE OF TEXAN

Rousing Reception For General Freeman Is Given Commander

SPECIAL TRAINS BRING VISITORS

For First Time Weight Of Years Presses On Old Warriors

(Associated Press)

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., May 18.—Robert Scott, 86, a Confederate veteran from Nacogdoches, Texas, died last night at a local hospital.

Scott, a native of Alabama, was stricken while he was on a special train from Texas, approaching Montgomery, early yesterday. He was given medical attention and continued on to Birmingham where an ambulance removed him to a local hospital. He was born in Gainesville, Ala., and enlisted in an Alabama regiment at the outbreak of the war.

He was the first Confederate veteran to die here during the reunion.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., May 18.—Arrival today of General W. B. Freeman, Richmond, commander-in-chief of the United Confederate veterans, was a signal for a wave of enthusiasm that swept the crowds gathered here for the 36th annual reunion.

The grey-clad soldiers already on the ground gave their commander a rousing reception when he established headquarters at the municipal auditorium.

General Freeman plunged into a busy program the moment he arrived. After hours devoted to preliminary affairs of the reunion, he was guest at a luncheon of the Confederate Southern Memorial Association in honor of Mrs. A. McD. Wilson, president general. Later in the day he was presented to the memorial association at a "welcome meeting" which preceded a business session.

Special trains arriving today from all quarters of the South, brought hundreds of veterans, sponsors and maids. Many of the aged men seemed tired out from the long journey. These men were given rest and food and opportunity to revivify their flagging physical resources.

Officials had expected 4,000 veterans, but it appeared unlikely that number would be reached, even approximately. The thinking line never was so depleted. For the first time that the veterans have met, it seemed the weight of years had caused crushing defeat.

It was a mixed picture that opened before Birmingham today, the silver haired hero living over again a period marked by profitless waste of blood, hobbled through the streets with a vivacious maid of the new South as his support. Gay colors dipped to the breeze as these old warriors saluted the stars and stripes, while doing honor to their own stars and bars.

In the Kitchen with Famous Cooks

FIVE WAYS TO PREPARE CHICKEN

These Are Favorite Recipes
of Four Famous Cooks

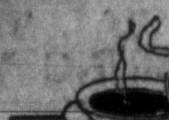

(Editor's Note: This is one of a series of unusual cooking articles contributed to this paper by six famous cooks.)

Chicken is a universal favorite. Very few folks can find it in their hearts to refuse a second helping of this appetizing fowl. Four famous cooks give tempting recipes for cooking it—fricassée, fried, broiled, stewed, and soup. There's variety enough for everyone!

MRS. SARAH
TYSON RORER

Mrs. Sarah Tyson Rorer, the Philadelphia cooking expert, has a recipe for a delicious chicken corn soup. "This is an excellent dish," she says. "With a salad, coffee, and a bit of ripe cheese it makes a wholesome meal."

Chicken Corn Soup

Her directions follow: Singe, draw, and cut up as for stewing a two-year-old hen. Put it in a kettle, and cover with three quarts of cold water. Bring to a boil, and cook until tender about two hours.

Remove chicken, skim the broth, and put it back on the burner. Add two medium sized onions chopped, a teaspoon of salt, dash of pepper, and a box of noodles. Add one pint of drained or fresh cut-off corn. Cover and cook 15 minutes. Add the chicken cut into small pieces. When hot, serve. If too thick, add milk to thin.

Delicious Fricassée

For chicken fricassée, made according to the recipe of Mrs. Kate Vaughan, Los Angeles cooking expert, select a young chicken, weighing about 3½ pounds. Season pieces of chicken with salt and pepper, dredge with flour, and fry in hot fat until brown. Place in casserole, add water and cook in hot oven, 250 degrees F. for one hour. Keep the cover on the casserole.

As They Cook It "Out West"

Pacific Coast fried chicken is delicious. You have the word of Mrs. Belle DeGraf for that. Mrs. DeGraf is a domestic science counselor in San Francisco.

For this dish cut one medium sized young chicken as for fricassée. Sprinkle each piece with salt and pepper and dredge with flour. Heat two tablespoons butter or chicken fat in frying pan. Fry chicken until well browned. Cover with hot water. Add one tablespoon minced onion and cook until the chicken is tender, using a low flame. When chicken is done, remove to serving plate. If any liquid remains in pan, drain off in cup.

Put 2 tablespoons of butter in the pan. Add 2 tablespoons of flour. Mix until smooth, then add 2 cups of thin cream or cream and liquid left to make 2 cups. Stir until creamy. Then add one tablespoon finely shredded green pepper, and ½ teaspoon salt. Simmer a few minutes, then pour around, not over the chicken.

To prepare the green pepper pour boiling water over it and let stand 10 minutes. Shred with scissors.

Two Southern Methods

Miss Rose Michaels, New Orleans domestic science specialist, comes from the south, where chicken is one of the most popular dishes. She gives two southern ways of preparing it.

For southern broiled chicken, she says, select a very young chicken. Clean, singe, and split it down the back. It will almost lie flat. Season with salt and pepper, and brush melted butter all over it. Have a broiler ready over a moderate fire. Place chicken in it, and let it broil slowly for a half hour or a little longer if the chicken is not so tender.

Turn the chicken once in a while to brown both sides. When done, place on a heated platter which has been garnished with sprigs of parsley or lettuce leaves. Pour melted butter over chicken, and serve hot.

With Brown Sauce

Chicken prepared with brown sauce is good served with rice. Miss Michaels says. Here are the ingredients:

- 1 chicken
- 2 tablespoons lard
- 1 sprig each of thyme, parsley, and bay leaf
- 1 onion
- 3 tablespoons flour, salt and pepper to taste

Clean and cut chicken in small pieces. Season well with salt and pepper. Chop onion fine. Put lard into deep pot. When hot add onion and let brown. Add flour. Let this brown, and add chicken. Let simmer a few minutes with thyme, parsley, and bay leaf chopped fine. Skim often. When all is nicely brown, add ½ pint boiling water. Stir until it begins to boil.

If necessary, add more salt and pepper. Cover and let simmer until tender (about an hour). The gizzard, liver, and heart may be cooked with sauce, and served with boiled rice.

No matter if the chicken is old or young, you can make it taste good if you choose one of these recipes.

(Be sure to read the interesting cooking article on this page next week.)

New Toaster

It really pays to invest in a good toaster which lasts a lifetime. Many hardware stores are displaying a new line of toasters. It makes four evenly browned slices of toast at a time. It does not warp. Very handy too, for crisping breakfast cereals. Its handle is ever cool. It can be used with equally good results on oil, wood, coal, or gas stoves.

Cowart Makes Known The Position Of Association On Educational Issues

Education Forces Wish Public To Know What Is Expected Of Future Chief Executive.

(Associated Press)
MONTGOMERY, Ala., May 18.—In a letter to an Alabama newspaper, the Alabama Educational Association through its president, O. C. Carmichael and secretary, R. W. Cowart, have made plain the attitude of the association on the question of a proposed bond issue.

The statement says: "Some days ago there appeared in your paper a news item to the effect that the educational forces of the state would press the candidates for governor on their position relative to a thirty-six million ($36,000,000) dollar bond issue for schools and that in all probability Mr. W. F. Feagin would head the organization for such a bond issue."

"As president and secretary of the Alabama Educational Association we are writing to state that we know nothing of any such intention on the part of the educational forces of the state and a letter from Mr. Feagin states that he knows nothing of the matter. The Alabama Educational Association has not contemplated any action of this kind and wish that you might make this clear through your columns by the publication of this letter."

"On the eve of the convention of the Alabama Educational Association recently held in Birmingham, the executive committee wired each of the four candidates that the teachers would be interested to know what each candidate's 'definite recommendation would be for securing more revenue for schools if elected governor.' On the last day of the convention the research committee, appointed to study the needs of the schools made a report to the assembly of delegates, briefly stated, was that for the next four years at least $18,000,000 additional should be provided for the current operating expenses of all schools, providing for gradual increase as follows: Beginning with $3,000,000 additional for the first year, $4,000,000 for the second; $5,000,000 for the third and $6,000,000 for the fourth year. The purposes for which these additional amounts were needed were stated in the report and will not be retold here.

"The report stated further that at least $18,000,000 should be provided for capital outlay expenditure (buildings, lands and equipment.) during the next four years. Three million the first year and five million for each of the three remaining years. No recommendations were made for raising any of the needed revenue. We believed this to be the duty of our representatives in government in response to the wishes of the people. We should like to make it clear, however, that we would not advocate a bond issue to provide funds for the current expenses of the schools. A bond issue for lands, building, and equipment, however, is the general method of financing such expenditures and probably is the only means of providing large sums for immediate use.

"We shall thank you to publish this communication in order to clear up any misunderstanding and to make clear the position of the Alabama Educational Association."

News of any girl this day and time winning a sewing championship is unusual, most people think that sewing in out-of-date other than for tailors.

If you wish to support a winning candidate, have him place his name in the ring on a platform of absolute guarantee—against the mosquito—summer is coming.

If June produces as much activity in the business world as it causes turmoil in the matrimonial sea, it is likely the summer slump will not hit here this year.

Danville is far ahead of other Morgan county sections in crop reports this year. That should be sufficient indication to the board of revenue that the intervening five mile road strip which needs work, needs it now.

Huntsville is going to resurface some brick thoroughfares. Just to show the Madison capital that we are really friendly we hope that they don't turn out to have lots of small Second avenues.

This is the time of the year that all young men seek the sunshine, that they might appear like the hero in the story book from out in the great open spaces with that touch of bronze.

Speaking of sunshine, what do you think of the fellow who comes along the street with a wilted arm, a limb off at the knee, a handful of pencils at one cent profit each—and a smile on his face?

Work on the Tennessee River bridge is mighty slow when compared with the wishes of people of this section of Morgan county and the southern end of Limestone county. Tourists likewise enter their bit of criticism, desiring to go most any other way but the ferry route.

Albany-Decatur can well afford to center interest on one industrial plant for the time being. Getting one industry is a good sized job particularly when other communities and cities are after the same plant. Too many irons in the fire is likely to awaken us to the reality of a bad dream.

Tuscumbia broke into the headlines Sunday with a shooting on the main streets of the city. That is the kind of publicity that none of us wish, but we hope that none of the Valley cities will come in for the same kind of publicity in the future. No matter how good a man's aim, if he shoots on a public street he is guilty of crime, he has endangered the lives of others.

If people really took the trouble to assess personal properties at even a fair value, the majority of them, there would be no necessity for burdensome tax rates. The difficulty is located in so many people taking the opportunity to slip by the tax books when the business of assessment of properties should be looked upon as a conscientious duty.

Governor Peay, of Tennessee, running for his third term, proposes a tax on face powders, perfumes and other cosmetics. He believes that this will bring in a revenue women will be taking their beauty naps on election day, however, such a tax is just when it is considered that he hopes to remove property taxes by such means. He already has a tobacco tax that is bringing in $1,500,000, a tobacco tax that reaches many people who are not otherwise taxed. Such taxation is just.

If the four candidates for governor should arrange to meet at one place and discuss their platforms, leaving the people as the sole judges of merit, it is likely that explanations of methods for raising educational and road funds would be understood. Politicians generally place their platform before the people without stating just what means they hope to employ for bringing about the rosy hue future, then after they ride into office they are unable to get things going by other than heavy taxation methods. The time to investigate things is before they are forced on us.

REAL HELP FOR THE FARMER URGED RATHER THAN SOB-SINGING

Reading about farm appropriations and regulations in the legislative branches of our government is something we get a good deal of, something we have learned to regard as a joke and the Long Prairie, Minn., Leader says so in substance without mincing words in the following short paragraph:

We would like to support someone for the Legislature who would run on a platform of putting all "friends of the farmer" in jail for 90-day terms or so. These so-called farmer friends, with their calamity howling are doing the farmer and the cause of farming a great harm. There is nothing the matter with farming, if these professional friends would leave it alone. As a matter of fact, but little of the calamity howling comes from the farmer. It is produced for the purpose of fooling the farmers, and by a class of men who want to make use of the farmer for their own selfish benefit. Let a movement be started to sit down on the professional friends of the farmer. Such a movement would be something really worth while in behalf of constructive agricultural farm prosperity. Farming is all right, and so is the farmer.—Long Prairie, Minn., Leader.

And there is much truth in what has been told by the Minnesota paper. The farmer is a victim of self pity if these forces continue to harass him about his failures and his inability to take care of himself. The farmer must be one of the best financiers in the world, he lives on less, saves on a short margin of profit while the agricultural output is many times the industrial output in this nation. Agriculture is no weakling, never has been. It will continue to lead the nation in output, though every inch of natural resource in mineral wealth is utilized. Therefore it must be considered that farm aid is something that is not so much needed as road aid and the bettering of general conditions pertaining to the marketing of this immense output.

Farm marketing does need aid. We see that in our own communities, we see growers come in from day to day, but not in anything like the large numbers they should be for they cannot get to these cities with the same facilities that they might reach others. Roads are an important link in so-called farm aid. Calamity howling cannot aid for if swan songs must be sung for agriculture then it is the wise thing to let the farmer sing his own tune. Agriculture is a tremendous force in our nation and will continue to mount in proportion if townspeople in every community center and every small and large city will see to it that the farmer has means for transporting his material and then see that he has a ready market for his product at a fair margin of profit. These items will really prove worthwhile to the farming class and the consumer and it will not require a tremendous outlay of money to accomplish.

FOLKS ARE JUST FOLKS, NO MATTER HOW FAR THEY MAY ASCEND LIFE'S LADDER

Perhaps one of the finest illustrations of mother Democracy's teaching of fundamentals in America is seen in the following paragraph taken from the editorial columns of the Gadsden Times-News:

Sometimes "this divinity that doth hedge a king" seems brittle stuff. Ever and anon the days news reminds us that potentates "n sich" are but "even as you and I."

Here's President Calvin Coolidge, for instance, taking a hot bath and going to bed to cure his cold.

The news doesn't say, but here's wagering that the fair hands of the first lady mixed him a brew of hot ginger tea or lemonade and perhaps put a flatiron or hot water bottle to the presidential feet.

In the same day's news we read of a hoot owl who, all unheeded of the sanctity of presidents, flew into the president's chamber and perched upon the presidential bedpost.

It is not altogether improbable that presidential ears are assailed by the midnight serenades of strolling Toms or early-rising chanticleers, and that presidential feet encase themselves in slippers to escape the tag games of possible executive mansion mice.

Even grand and glorious democracies have a way of forgetting that plain red blood runs in the veins of presidents and other moguls. It takes a president's hot baths and owls on his bedpost to remind us.

Kings and potentates don't survive in America, but there are some folks around this nation who still believe in "blue blood" and incidentally fairy tales, that is they place themselves upon a pedestal, so high that little neighbors next door with good American red blood running through their veins can't even reach the tilted chin.

It is truth that the president of the United States, the most capable executive in the legislative and business world known to Americans, lives just like the 115,000,000 other Americans. He was brought up to live that way and it is probable that Calvin Coolidge would like for those loyal subjects of his to realize just what he has to go through with. We imagine that while the president is cruising about on the Mayflower and the elements prove unkind that there are just a few wrinkles in the brow of the executive head and that he is not altogether given to wearing his usual placid mask. Perhaps it's at a ball game and the veteran Walter Johnson pulls out of a tight situation, isn't it reasonable to believe that the president smiles at the grit of the old veteran just like every other American? Why, little as you might think it, and though many might regard it as extremely bad form, President Coolidge likely cracks peanuts during the game and then goes home to take a dose of medicine because the wonderful product of Southern fields does not agree entirely with his executive New England stomach. These people have hearts and minds of their own, no matter how far up Life's ladder they may have climbed. It is a blessing to be human, an extreme pleasure that is not denied the highest, or the lowest of us all. Some of us may keep our heads high, but when we get home after a long hot summery day, it is quite reasonable to assume that there is a tendency to loosen the collar, remove the shoes and slip into a tattered pair of house slippers. It is the great American custom of being democratic, being more than the highest station may call for, ridding the dignity and becoming just a plain citizen. That is peace.

intend to live to 150." She will not but she might. In the human machine, as in the automobile any one of a dozen parts, going wrong can stop the engine, heart, lungs, kidneys, especially since they are always overworked—arteries, even the dull pancreas, can send Caesar or Alexander to his tomb. Unfortunately, the human machine has no hood that can be lifted, to see what's wrong. Surgeons do put in spare parts, glands, etc., but they are not guaranteed. There is no spare heart to be safe, take care of your machinery before it wears out.

MRS. CARTER says dogs have qualities lacking in men. "They never talk back, they keep secrets, they are never unfaithful," Madame De Sevigne said it first, but it is true. On the other hand, no dog can say to a lady, "You are the only absolutely perfect woman in the world," and make the poor thing believe it. That's a drawback.

EMPLOYERS, with rich men, trying to get rich, should learn by heart nine words from Henry Ford's statement on wages. "Small pay hurts business more than it does labor." A worker earning barely enough to keep himself and his family alive, can not add to general prosperity, and big fortunes are based on surplus wages, the money that workers earn, above the bare cost of living.

"LOW WAGES," says Ford, "will break business far more quickly than they will break labor." Few rich men understand that, which proves that you can get rich without possessing much intelligence. Many are rich, because lack of imagination has kept them from thinking about anything except money.

YOU read of American hi-jackers that take by violence, whiskey that bootleggers smuggle in by cunning or bribery, usually bribery. They sell you the whiskey then break into your house and take it back.

But learn from Joseph Topitzky, who teaches the real estate business China's product.

"In China," says Topitzky, "the priest in the temple sells you secretly, for half its value the ancient work of art that you covet, Bronze Buddha, wonderful embroidery, anything. You pay, start down the hill, a gong sounds faintly, indignant servants of the temple rush out, take away your loot but don't hurt you. The Chinese, however are honorable in business, even hi-jackers in the to many that American hi-jackers temples. When you have bought the same thing three times and paid for it three times you are allowed to keep it, the gong does not ring.

Paying half its value three times you pay fifty per cent more than it is worth, but that is better treatment than you get from your bootlegger or hi-jacker, in America."

LOS ANGELES brings down from the distant mountains water to supply eleven hundred thousand people. Ranchers along the line of the great pipe, declaring that Los Angeles takes water that should be theirs, have been at war with the city for three years. On Thursday they dynamited the pipe line, making a ten foot hole, wasting millions of gallons of water, but not, fortunately, jeopardizing the city's supply.

THIS bitterness shows the importance of water preservation all man's passion. A determination to through the west, and illustrates protect land that he calls his own. And that should enlighten single tax enthusiasts. Only individual ownerships of land has established this civilization and wiped out the Nomadic barbarism. Only land ownership makes men fight for their country, as they fought at Verdun.

THE British strike disorganized business and railroads, until conditions improve, will need fewer men. The unions say "take back all or none out" and there is possibility of another fight.

Industry and the semi-civilization that it has produced are hard to establish, easily put out of order. No man kicks his watch because it does not keep perfect time. He knows the result, capital and labor will gradually learn that it is dangerous for them to kick each other.

IN BRITAIN'S COAL trouble there are two views, far apart. Your sympathy with either side depends on how you have been taught to think. The strike ends on the implied understanding that mine owners will not cut wages and govern. ment subsidy will pay the owners in cash the profit that a wage cut would have supplied. Outrageous that all the people should be taxed to keep up miners wages. The law of supply and demand should work, and then men should get paid accordingly. So says conservatism.

OUTRAGEOUS that mine owners, never doing a stroke of work should be allowed to put profits ahead of decent pay for working men, a decent life for their wives and children. Instead of bribing owners to keep up wages, government should tell them to give their fair pay, or government would work the mines. So says labor.

CONSERVATISM'S theory is old and respectable. "If you don't like the wages, get out." But that old theory is becoming wobbly. The earth does not "owe every man a living," but those that hire other men to work for them, and take the profit on their labor, owe the workers, ahead of any profit. The demonstration made by British labor will add strength to their fair wage theory. You do not get much in this world, until you prove that you can take it.

Tanner News

SYNOPSIS

Molly Shannon, university student, heart-broken because she has been deserted by Stephen Cochran, her fiance, wanders dazedly about at night, anxious to escape life, to get away from herself. Finally she enters a garishly-furnished house in the slums of the town. But she is disgusted at what she sees. A man standing in the hallway eyes her with a narrowed, speculative stare. Molly feels as if she were in the inferno.

With a smothered cry Molly threw up her hands to shut it out, let her head sink. Nausea seized her—horror, disgust. Her very flesh winced and cringed. She had not supposed it would be like that. She had not thought how it would be. She turned stumbling and groping for the door. She wanted to destroy herself, but not like that—oh, not like that. . . .

"I'm afraid it's locked." She started, looked back over her shoulder. For the first time, she noticed the man standing by the stairs. He was smiling pleasantly at her, but still with that narrowed, speculative gaze. He was sizing her up, appraising what she might be worth as a new sensation. His gaze became a part of the pitiless, white glare in the room. It was like an X-ray turned upon her, which she could neither escape nor fend against. She stared back at him dumbly. Terror crept up her limbs, numbing and paralyzing. She told herself she must keep her head, she must think; on no account must she stop looking at him.

Instead, she seized the door knob and shook it frenziedly. She struck at the panelings, beat them with her fists, threw her weight again and again upon them. He was right. It was locked. She tried to cry out, but her voice faded in her throat. She faced round at last with an inert, unfinished gesture of appeal to the man by the stairs. It used up the final atom of her strength. But he only went on smiling at her out of the eyes that had seen everything, experienced everything. . . . If it were not for this creeping numbness, this dead mass of tons and mountains settling upon her, she might explain to him—she might make him understand. She wanted to destroy herself, but not like that—O God, not like that! . . .

The man, watching, saw her go down. . . .

CHAPTER XIV

The express from the North, Mexico-bound, pulls into the capital at four o'clock, which is just before dawn in summer. It dawdles about an unconscionable time in the railroad yards, finally gets it self reversed and backs into the station, ready for the bridge over the river.

Gregory Cochran, who had been jumping from one extreme to another of the vast state in the interest of a certain political movement, was returning home after an appreciable absence. He permitted himself to be brushed down and handed the negro porter the usual fee. He covered a yawn, as he settled again in his section and gazed out through the half-screen at the grimy waste of tracks and the ugly, tumble-down buildings along the water front.

He was senior partner of the capital's best and oldest law firm, and he had an honorable term of service on the bench to his credit, though he had recently resigned in the latter capacity to go back into private practice.

At the express, which had been switching and fussing about now for a quarter of an hour, lurched to a full stop still at some distance from the station. Cochran bent suddenly nearer to the window. He pressed his face almost against the screen—always with the allowance for his deliberate and rather cumbersome manner. By the side of the track, so close, indeed, that but for the screen he could have put out his hand and touched her, a girl stood waiting for the train to pass.

She was plainly, but not unbecomingly dressed. The drooping brim of a black straw hat concealed her face, but she was young by the alightness and suppleness of her body, which was limned with minute detail against the red and gold of the dawn. She stood in a sort of pitched-forward attitude, like a slim pine sapling blown half over by the wind. Her arms hung straight and lax before her. Her shoulders sagged inward. Cochran took in every item of her appearance even to the limp, late-lacking of white fingers across the dark stuff of her skirt.

The train jared to a start, wheels began to grind. Soon the figure of the girl was swallowed up in the mists and half lights of the dawn. With another muttered ejaculation Cochran turned his glance from the window. The white, impassive face hung distinct and compelling before him; it neither receded nor grew dim. The eyes, staring, sightless, were like blank openings into a chancel house, where all that had once been held beautiful or dear lay strewn about in pitiful attitudes of death. She had looked at him, but she had not seen him.

"Here, Uncle Ike"—he pointed out his bags to the elderly negro who bustled up at this juncture, gleaming welcome from every black pore and every separate one of his wide apart, tombstone teeth—"you take these things on to the house. I'm going to walk."

The grinning black mouth stopped grinning—to yawn even more cavernously with astonishment and dismay. "Yo' gwine walk, Marso Greg?" he stammered. "Whut fer yo' gwine do dat when Mis' Sary she come an' sount me fer to . . ."

"I'm going to walk," Cochran repeated quietly. "If my mother is awake, tell her I'll be on presently."

Molly had been for upward of four hours in the white house with the pillars—most of the time unconscious. She had a blurred impression that they had been very kind to her there. They had even wanted to send her home in a cab, but she insisted that she was quite able to walk. Their kindness had taken nothing from the horror of that first searing moment—from her nausea and revulsion at the way that man had looked at her. It was as if by that mere glance she had been branded for life—set aside as leprous and unclean. That she had escaped was a mere external incident. It meant nothing one way or another. The thought was what convicted one. She had deliberately willed this thing. She had taken the step. From that she could never escape. But at least . . .

The unfinished phrase had to do with her present destination. She had considered the railroad bridge across the river, but it was so high. . . . The vision of that blank drop through space lifted the heart out of her numbed body with the pang of final dissolution itself. Farther along there was a spot where one could climb down to a little buttress of rock which hung low over the water. Often she had noticed it from the train. To reach this it was necessary to cross the railroad tracks, keep to the sidewalk for a few blocks, then double back toward the river. A train was coming in, and she had to wait for it to pass.

A swift impulse, almost executed before she could check it, lifted the heart out of her again. But no—the train was moving too slowly—backing in. She might only be mangled a little and go on living—with that cowed look of a trapped rat in her eyes like Mr. Kreuzer. . . .

The shrill grating of wheels, the echoing concussion of cars jerked to a stop, caused her to lift her head. She found herself staring into the interior of a dimly lighted, palatial-looking Pullman. Molly had never been in a sleeping-car in her life.

After a time she became conscious of a face at the window, of a pair of eyes, questioning and keenly blue, almost on a level with her own. She stared back dully for a little, then let her head sink again on her breast. An instant later she scarcely remembered to have seen the face at all. Her brain was a camera without a negative.

When the train had passed she went on over the tracks—came out presently at the river bank. It was still dark despite the flare of color in the east, and she had passed no one, not even a policeman. She picked her footing carefully down the steep incline to the point which overhung the water.

DREADFUL PAINS

Georgia Lady, Who Had Lost Too Much Weight, Was Advised to Take Cardui and Is Now Well.

Columbus, Ga.—Mrs. George S. Hunter, of this city, writes: "After I married, thirteen months ago, I suffered with dreadful pains in my sides during... My side hurt so bad it nearly killed me. I had to go to bed and stay sometimes two weeks at a time. I could not work and I just dragged around the house."

"I got very thin—I went from 125 pounds down to less than 100. My mother had long been a user of Cardui and she knew what a good medicine it was for this trouble, so she told me to get some and take it. I sent to the store after it and before I had taken the first bottle I began to improve."

"My side hurt less and I began to improve in health... The Cardui acted as a fine tonic and I do not feel like the same person. I am so much better. I am well now. I have gained ten pounds and am still gaining. My sides do not trouble me at all."

"I wish every suffering woman knew about Cardui." NC-160

SPORTS

Decatur Takes Three-Game Series With Hard Hitting; Game Halts For Prize Fight

Decatur captured the rubber game yesterday afternoon at Malone Park, defeating Albany 10-9, after an afternoon of hectic experience, a near track meet, a prize fight and some bit of disturbance caused when members of the fan delegation came upon the field to take things into their own hands. Napps was on the mound for Decatur and was given good support, his team mates providing the necessary bludgeoning to bring him into port.

Decatur kept out in front most of the way with loose fielding behind Perie, Albany hurler, causing him much anxiety throughout the engagement. Many seemingly harmless singles went for extra base blows when outfielders let the agate get away from them and down the field.

Decatur took the series, winning the last two games 4-3 and 10-9. Albany took the first encounter 9-7.

The game almost came to a disastrous and untimely ending yesterday afternoon when the love of fans switched from the national sport to antics of the prize ring. Three advocates of the arena were transformed into placid peacemakers when two more entered the fray and rocked one of the warlike characters to sleep with a blow on the nose. Police assistance was necessary and fines were imposed in police court this morning, one of the alleged battlers forfeiting his bond.

It is likely that the Albany and Decatur series will be continued intermittently throughout the summer, providing the state law against prize fighting is upheld. The teams are fairly well matched and with a little support from the fans promise to blossom into full fledged aggregations of exceptional amateur ball tossers.

This series was not played under the regulations imposed by high school authorities, though most of the lineup of the two outfits came from the classrooms of the two local institutions.

Child Killed By A School Truck

(Associated Press).

BIRMINGHAM, May 18.—A boy, believed to be John Parker, 11, was killed this morning when he was crushed beneath the wheels of a heavy school bus near Maxine, in the northwest part of Jefferson county. It was not learned whether the child fell from the bus or was struck by it as he was crossing the road.

Mrs. Thompson Is Placed Under Bond

Mrs. Lola Thompson, against whom Deputy Sheriff H. M. Wiley yesterday filed an affidavit charging manslaughter, in connection with the death of Elizabeth Thomas, aged five years has been placed under $1,000 bond, it was stated at the courthouse today. The Thomas child was struck by an automobile last week and killed. The accident occurred on the Bee Line highway, near Shoal Creek bridge south of Hartselle.

Hartselle News

News has been received from Dundar Boger at Tampa Florida, that he will spend his annual vacation here with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Boger, and visit the haunts of the finny tribe at the local fishing places near here, as has been his custom for the past several seasons.

Several thousand fish for propagation purposes were received by members of the Hartselle Fishing club from the fish hatchery at Warm Springs Georgia recently, and deposited in Lake Ashworth near town.

Funeral services for Mrs. Geo. A. Vest, who died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Walter Newman near town last week, were held from the First Methodist church of which the deceased had been a member for a long period of years.

Services were conducted by Rev. R. W. Anderson, assisted by Rev. J. H. Hill of Albany, and Rev. J. B. M. Rice junior pastor.

She reared a splendid family of boy's and girl's several of whom survive her.

Two sons, Messrs. M. G. and Clellie Vest reside here. The interment was made in Hartselle cemetery, followed to the last resting place by a con-

Voice of People

We people who reside outside of Albany on the Bee Line highway are very grateful to the Daily for speaking of the condition of Echols' hill road. It is indeed in a bad condition and we who must travel over it several times each day hope the city can do something to improve it. We trade with Albany and Decatur merchants. We carry our children to school, and attend church over the unkept thoroughfare. We carry our farm produce over the same way to dispose of it.

We never lose an opportunity to boost our towns to all tourists. We are Daily readers and with them, heartily endorse the better street plan for the entrance to our city.

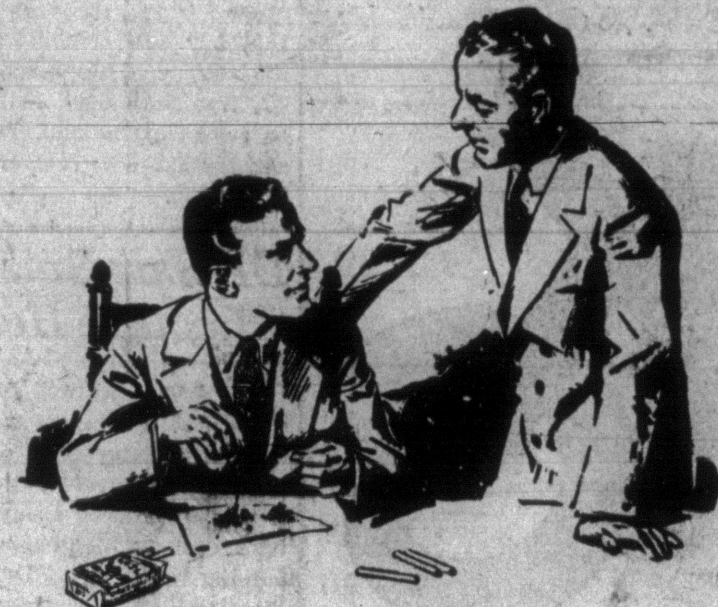

MRS. ELIZABETH FARRER.

The report for 1925 shows that Alabama produced a total of 20,408,656 tons of coal for that year, a greater amount than ever before recorded. Jefferson county was shown to have led all the rest in production.

course of friends and relatives. Mrs. Vest was near 70 years of age, and had been in failing health for some time past.

"Have a Camel"

Open one up! The tobacco tells its own story

CAMELS are made of the choicest Turkish and Domestic tobaccos grown. To prove what we say about Camel's tobacco quality, make this test:

Take a Camel and any other cigarette. Tear off the papers and place the tobaccos from the two cigarettes in separate piles. Now shake them up and examine the tobaccos. Your own eyes will quickly show you the difference, how the Camel tobacco is longer and of a ripier color. Then gather up the two piles separately—and smell them.

You will at once notice the rich, fragrant aroma of Camel tobaccos not found in the other.

This marked difference is even more apparent when you "taste the smoke." It is solely because of the quality of the tobaccos and the skill of the blending that Camels never tire the taste, never leave a cigaretty after-taste.

Camels are so good that we know you will like them. Give them every test known and you will find Camels the highest quality cigarette made, regardless of price. Have a Camel!
